Mrs. Joseph Costello of No. 2054 8th street northwest. The child died yesterday morning after suffering intense agony. Amanda Eatmon, cable dispatch from the home office this a midwife, had charge of the case when the child was born. It was the intention of the parents of the child to have a physician attend the mother, but the child was born at night and Amanda's advice to the effect that a physician was not necessary was followed and so she took full charge of the ense. Later on the child was taken sick and the midwife used a mixture of soot and The effect of the mixture was fatal. The midwife thought she was using the pure vaseline with the soot and before the coroner's jury today she said she sent for the vaseline, a memoranda given her by a physician. The vaseline was sent to her a bottle. When questioned she said she had been operating as a midwife for more than fifty years, and that she had worked with some of the finest physicians in Virginia. The jury returned a verdict exonerating

GOV. CROUNSE DECLINES.

He Will Have Nothing to Do With Protesting Silverites. LINCOLN, Neb., Sept. 19.-When the Pan-American Bimetallic Association some weeks ago arranged for a convention at St. Louis circulars were sent to Gov. Crounse of Nebraska requesting him to send dele gates from Nebraska to the meeting: The governor in a letter to the secretary re fuses emphatically to appoint delegates and replies to the invitation in the following style: "Some time since I received a letter from you transmitting a circular purporting to be issued by the Pan - American Bimetallic Association, calling a con-vention of representatives of the south-ern states, certain named western states, old Mexico, and all the countries of South America to convene at St. Louis on the third day of October next, and inviting me o name representatives from Nebraska. have also your letter of more recent date I have also your letter of more recent date expressing an anxiety that the state be represented here and asking me if it is my purpose to appoint such delegates.

"In reply I have to advise you that I shall appoint none, nor do anything to put this state in the attitude of seeming sympathy with the spirit disclosed by the call and which is likely to possess the convention.

and which is likely to possess the conven-tion.

"The call not only excludes many of the states from participating in the considera-tion of the question which concerns all alike, but its arraignment of certain ones among them as engaged in a conspiracy against the south and west, as well as the urther proposition to institute a sectiona boycott against them, is in my judgment both silly and virulous. "I am in Tavor of honest bimetallism, and believe that a system of finance can be debelieve that a system of mannee can be de-vised by which both gold and silver can be utilized as the basis of our national cur-rency, the former, which is the world's measure, being the standard. I mistrust, however, that the bimetallism your asso-ciation professes is but the pretext for the free coinage of silver, with silver monometallism and consequent debasement of the currency for its object. I can see why a silver producing state like Colorado should a silver producing state like Colorado should advocate the free colnage of silver, but I have no patience with those who would invoke jealousy and sectional hostility to advance that end, while I deplore ignorance which can be caught by pleas of that kind. "No, Mr. Newell, Nebraska through no consent of mine will join in sowing the seeds of secession in St. Louis. If she appears there it will be through volunteers. pears there, it will be through volunteers Not unlike some states in her neighborhood she has plenty of individuals who no doub could delight your convention. They are for the most part men who have not earned place on our assessment rolls, and who, hav-ing demonstrated their ability to conduct their own affairs successfully, think them-selves qualified to join a Florida, old Mexi-co and Argentine Republic in instructing the world on the subject of finance. These gentlemen, whose financial ability holds no parity with their ability to talk, would gladly engage in a crusade up to the 'bridle bits' against imaginary conspirators of London, Berlin, New York and Boston."

Various Matters That Citisens Bring to Official Attention.

The Commissioners have transmitted to Congress, with a recommendation for favorable action, a draft of a bill prepared by the collector of 'axes and the attorney for the District, with a view to making more efficient the law enforcing the collection of taxes by sales of property, the taxes on which are overdue.

The principal necessity for some legislation of this character is the impossibility under the present law of giving a tax deed which the courts will sustain, and the impracticability of enforcing in equity the lien of the District on the property which it is compelled to buy it at tax sales for the lack of other purchasers. The difference in the first case is the importance which courts attach to the most trivial technical defects in the 'ax sale advertisement, and in the second case to the almost insurmountable obstacles in the way of preparing the cases for hearings, to which all the parties concerned, howsoever remote, have the principal, interest and cost.

Another feature of the bill is that which permits the owner of the property sold at costs, &c., together with 50 per centum ad-ditional thereon. This is designed to prevent the purchasers of property at tax sales from extorting excessive exactions from those whose property they may have bought. There are other modifications incorporated in the bill, which extend the time and opportunity for redemption, in order to give delinquent taxpayers the broadest notice practicable.

CELEBRATED YESTERDAY

Court

Justice Administered to a Crowd of Petty Offenders Who Had Gotten Into Trouble Through Liquor-

As one of the results of the process Pennsylvania avenue yesterday there were today two processions in the Police Court. The participants in today's events were only spectators yesterday, and many of them had attempted to mix patriotism and spirits, but the result was a tired feeling this morning. Forty-five men, women and children made up the two processions. There were two colored men in the party who had a meeting of an unpleasant character, and whose heads will feel the result of the combat for some time to come. Yards of cotton bandages covered their heads, and one of the victims had his face partly covered from view. Court opened at the usual hour, and some difficulty was experienced in find-ing John Pinkney when his case was called for trial.

"Here's the charge against him," said Clerk Potts, "but where is the prisoner?" "Here he is," was the response of Balliff Kendig.
"Where?"
"Behind the rails," interrupted the court.

Throwing stones was the charge against the prisoner, and Judge Kimball wanted to know who had arrested the infant.

"He was arrested on complaint of a citizen," was what the judge was told.
"Step around here, boy, and tell me about this stone throwing." "I was down there yesterday," said the boy, "and some boy told me to trot. I told him I'd trot nowhere, and he threw stones at me."

"How many stones did you throw?"

"I didn't throw none."

F. I. Ruppert was the citizen who complained. His window was broken, and he saw this little boy near his store. There was no direct proof against the infant, who had been locked up all night, and the judge had been locked up all night, and the judge discharged him.

"The President spoke of the disorder in front of the grand stand yesterday," said Policemen Ciscle and Owens, who charged two gentlemanly appearing colored boys, Albert Madison and Joseph Galloway, with being responsible for it. The boys met for the first time yesterday after they were arrested. One of them was with a girl, and he denied that he was guilty of profanity or disorder of any kind. The other boy also denied the charge, and the former charged that Officer Ciscle struck him in the mouth, because he called a friend to send word to his mother. This the officer denied.

"Have you any witnesses?" asked the "Have you any witnesses?" asked the court of the boys.
"No, sir," responded one of the victima.
"We haven't had time to get any."

"Five dollars each."
Ephriam Duckett, who is well acquainted in police circles, was called to explain his conduct in Seaton Park, where he paraded arranged.

A fine of $10 or thirty days was imposed.
"Here again."
"Keep quiet."
Jessie McCoy was the woman who starte to disturb the court and before she got through she repeated the attempt. Jessie is an old offender, her only trouble being her inability to control her appetite for strong drink. She told the court that she strong drink. She told the court that she was married, but her husband's name was not revealed.

"I saw Jessie yesterday trying to get an old man to go with het," said Policeman Smith. "He got away from her and later she used obscene language because a druggist refused her a drink."

"She was locked up about two weeks ago," said Officer Brady, "and when she got out she asked me for five cents to get a "You sent my husband down last Thursday for assaulting an officer," said Jessie, "and I wish to God he had killed half of the policemen."

"When did you get out?"

"Nearly a year ago," was Jessie's reply.
"Won't you send me down till next pension day?" she asked. "My husband is in jail, and as long as I have a husband I am not going to work for anybody. "Yes, sir, thank you."
Allowing lifteen days for good behavior
Jessie will be released on the 4th of December, which will be pension day. Merely a Speciator. Sarah Scott, a neatly dressed colored woman, was a victim of unfortunate circumstances. She went to visit her mother in South Washington last night, and there was a fight on the street. Her presence there caused her arrest. Several sleeves of dresses and feathers from hats were picket up, but Sarah's clothing had not even beet disarranged. She was discharged.

Horace Williams, a colored boy, had a holiday yesterday and he went out to give an exhibition of bareback riding. His horse went on the sidewalk and his arrest fol-

"I had been out of work a long time, and I took it to sell."

"Did you sell it?"
"Yes, sir; I sold it to a man for $1.50."
"You can go to jail for six months."
Charles Reynolds, for an assault on Gregory Chavis, was fined $3, but not having the money he went down for six days.

A colored man named Robert Ross, who celebrated yesterday, indulged in the use of profanity last night, for which he was arrested by Policeman King. Ross was in that condition that he thought he would have some fun with the officer, which he did by slapping him in the face several times. For so amusing himself he had to defend a charge of assault. defend a charge of assault. The disorderly conduct case, the court thought, did not amount to much, and no fine was imposed on that account, but in the assault case a fine of $25 or thirty day?
